POETIC MATHS

Can Maths and Poetry go together..
Yes, if to a single goal, tethered..
When cold logic meeting imaginative flair
it's like old friends meet over a lager of beer
Many have done so, in the past Tataglia too, and the secret did last
Not he of the Godfather fame
But the one who played the mathematics game!
in Old India too when word size mattered
Scholars put discoveries in their sloka platters
And as Euler put it together so neat and clean when he said E to the power pi times i, plus 1 is zero, Gods equation, seen!
All five constants brought in at a time, and stars in heavens must have sounded their chyme!
So do enthusiastic mathemagicians say,
as they assert that this is certainly no play!
The stories of e, pi, i, discoveries
the fields where zero, and the numbers ply their trade the discovery of e, pi, i, we're also made unseen, they are in use everywhere here on earth, or in study of heavens, stars, there!
It's said that poetry. Maths can often transcend when ever they together somehow blend in the finest Music we find them there, we should wonder are they really two separate wares?
Great souls too for communion used,
these two communication tools
Plants, Animals, Insects, Birds, in fact Nature too
Are usually entwined with both these inseparable hues!
But still when in schools they are taught in separate classes, they are always brought!
Learning them with all our might should then our Mind and Heart Unite?
May be we should now mend our ways
And stop keeping them one another, at Bay!
Unite them and feel the Joy
Take it natural, avoid man- made ploys!
Let Maths and Poetry be ever entwined
In our Life as we dance and dine.
